Version was the first CAD application to support 3D modeling. Its original range of capabilities included drafting, model-based 3D modeling, object management, object-based drawing, computer-aided design, and engineering analysis. Subsequent versions added, in the words of the application's founder, Peter Nielson, "the ability to create the most accurate, precise drawings ever achieved, with special attention to be paid to consistent, comprehensive documentation." The earliest versions of AutoCAD Torrent Download were developed to read and write many of the popular "ascii" formats, such as those used for drafting and computer-aided design. For example, AutoCAD Free Download version 1.0 could read and write "step-drawing" file format, "off-line" programs, and both word processing and drawing formats (including the widely used EDraw). Other well-known file formats supported by AutoCAD Torrent Download include DWF, DWT, DXF, and ACAD. These files, along with their read/write capabilities, are listed below. Because AutoCAD can read and write multiple file formats, it supports various operating systems. Versions for Microsoft Windows, Macintosh, and UNIX can be used, and these are all available in both native and installer forms. AutoCAD has also been ported to other operating systems, including Linux, Solaris, and Windows CE. Versions for other operating systems, including FreeBSD, OpenBSD, NetBSD, and UnixWare, are also available. A screen shot of AutoCAD from 2014. It is known to produce fluoroelastomers by high temperature polymerization of fluorinated olefin(s), preferably C.sub.2-4 fluoroethylene and perfluorovinyl ethers, optionally with a cure site monomer. Cure is achieved by exposing the polymer to gaseous fluorine at fluorine plasma polymerization temperature. Cure involves formation of polymer-bound fluorocarbon groups in the presence of oxygen, the fluorocarbon groups crosslinking the polymer and forming an elastomer, and curing the polymer after addition of a cure site monomer. Perfluorovinyl ethers are desirable in fluoroelastomers because they can be copolymerized with perfluorinated olefins to give products having good weatherability, oil resistance, chemical resistance and low compression set. Polymers containing these monomers can be crosslinked by polymer-bound fluorocarbon groups. Perfluorovinyl ethers having one or more thioether groups also can be copolymerized ca3bfb1094
