“Every player represents someone, from those who live the life of the professional, all the way through to the aspiring young player,” said Christoph Ohler, SVP, Brand Marketing at EA Sports. “FIFA is a celebration of the game of football – an experience that anyone can enjoy – and in FIFA 22 we wanted to make sure that authenticity is in every aspect of the game. With HyperMotion Technology, our goal was to put our players’ movements, tackles and challenges into the game and put them where they belong; on the pitch. This was a major challenge for us, but we think we’ve found a solution that creates a natural-feeling game with all of the intensity and emotion that we know our fans love.” Here are five new features in FIFA 22: Intuitive Player Control and Pass Dribbling FIFA 22 takes the unique and intuitive Player Motion, Ball Physics and Visual Intelligence developed in FIFA 19, but adds unique animation frames to each shot to better reflect the player’s actions during the shot, as well as an on-ball animation to better reflect the ball’s path. The result is a more intuitive dribbling system that will take players from point to point with more style and skill than ever before. Using Eye Tracking, FIFA 22 features a new on-ball view that can be toggled on or off for custom control points and momentum-based shot animations to make shooting and passing feel closer to the real thing. Defenses will be able to quickly track players by using real-time recognition and AI-controlled animations; for example, they will detect a dribbling player and rush to him to contest the ball. They will read your every move, and you will need to make those moves count. Defenses will respond when players lose the ball, and defenders’ reactions can be managed through configurable Defenses modes. Player Ambience FIFA 22 introduces Fully Dynamic Player Ambience, which empowers every player with unique settings that reflect their personality and playing style. Players will use their unique Personal Skill Guides (PSG) to dictate different movements, traits and behaviors in the game. The PSG will react to information such as player positioning, team and opponents, situation, and how the player is rated by the community. Players can use their PSGs to access a variety of movement traits, like Precision Touch, Agility, Pace, Power
