Q: What is the purpose of the "redirect" statement in an AJAX response? This seems to be a very common practice and I understand the GET and POST requests are passed into the response object, but I still don't understand why it's even needed to set a redirect URL to /success.php here? $.ajax({ url:"join.php", type: 'post', data: userData, dataType: 'json', success: function(data) { if(data.status == "success") { window.location.href = "/success.php"; } else { alert(data.message); } } }); Why is the window.location.href assigning to success.php considered wrong?
